We all need to learn to leap again and again in our working lives – developing new skills, new knowledge and adapting our mindset and behaviours for changing personal and business circumstances. Because the world does not stand still.

Many people later in life say they wished they had known more when they were younger. You can avoid that trap by empowering yourself early on and navigating your career with confidence and skill. Gain insight earlier to reduce the disappointment of hindsight!

Many people focus on technical skills without embracing the mindset, attitudes and so-called soft skills that are so vital in working life. Soft skills are tough! And they are transferable.

This workshop will give you a brilliant understanding of how to progress your career and start to develop your leadership skills – you don't need the title to start and lead!
